

Research Announcement: Moody's - EMEA leveraged finance rebounds in February as loan issuance increases

London, March 20, 2019 --

- Issuance of leveraged loans climbed ninefold to $9 billion in February amid risk appetite
- High-yield bond market remained subdued with low issuance

EMEA leveraged finance volumes jumped in February, driven by leveraged loans, Moody's Investors Service said today in its monthly High Yield Interest report.

Leveraged loans rose to $9 billion in February from less than $1 billion in January. High-yield bonds climbed to $3 billion from $2.3 billion.

"The loan market rebounded significantly, and risk appetite was healthy with three new issuers entering the market," said Peter Firth, an Associate Managing Director at Moody's. "The leveraged finance market so far in 2019 continues to be a story of loans."

The three new issuers were JVC, Amer Sports and Proxiserve. Of the seven loan issuers five were based in the U.K. despite Brexit looming.

The bond market remained cautious with very low issuance. Four of the five transactions were in the safer Ba range, and only one was U.K.-based.
